

Bringing out the Best in Children: Strategies for Students with Learning Disabilities and Attention Disorders

with Dr. Sam Goldstein, University of Utah School of Medicine & George Mason University

This internationally known expert will enhance our understanding of students with these disorders and show us how we can assist them in becoming the best they can be.

Who should attend?
Teachers, Parents, Clinicians, Health Care Professionals, and all those who live or work with children affected by these disorders.

In Sam Goldstein's workshop, you will learn about:

- ♦ specific types of Learning Disabilities and their causes.
- ♦ the most current conceptualization of Attention Disorders and their causes.
- ♦ implications for school, everyday life and adulthood resulting from Learning Disabilities and Attention Disorders.
- ♦ methods to apply academic and cognitive strategies to reduce impairments caused by Learning Disabilities and Attention Disorders.
- ♦ methods to assess academic progress including Response to Intervention (RTI).
- ♦ strategies to facilitate the educational experiences of children with Attention Disorders.
- ♦ strategies to develop the underlying Executive and Neuropsychological abilities necessary for effective achievement, attention and behaviour.
